

How can I tell if the contributor agreed to appear in the film?

Deirdre Boyle, Associate Professor of Media Studies, the New School in NY

Duration of video clip: 42 seconds

Well I think in the film it becomes really apparent that she has a relationship with the filmmaker and that that becomes a very important way in which the viewer can assess what the ethics are between the subject and the filmmaker, and we have to sort of trust that her trust is a is an expression of her agreement to be in the film. She can't know what the film will be beyond that experience but she does trust the filmmaker and she trusts her family and it's in a community that those decisions get resolved.
